| 1.5 | Short description A “proverb” is a popular saying that contains an advice or states a generally accepted truth. A proverb is passed down through time with little change in form. A proverb should not be confused with a common cliché. In general, a proverb summarizes a situation or gives one’s opinion about a situation or a person covertly. People use proverbs to better convey their statement, emphasize on a particular aspect of the statement, and/or make their oral presentation more colourful. Proverbs represent a means to express one’s thoughts in a concise and/or metaphoric way. It can be used anywhere and anytime as and when an individual believes it to be adapted to the context of communication in which he is a co-participant. Proverbs are used in different contexts: family, educational and professional. Proverbs are short popular sayings with words containing an advice or a warning. A proverb is made of two situations but when they are compared and contrasted one gets the message. If that message is contemplated with the matter or situation being treated in a speech one gets an advice or a warning. New proverbs are being invented all the time and many of old ones are falling into disuse. |                                                                                                                                                                                  |

According to oral history, in the early days, during and after slavery when work was over, adults used to go back home and riddles were used during social gatherings among the workers (slaves and indentured labourers) in the evening. It was also used during leisure time especially after supper, when people used to sit in front of their huts, around some wise and entertaining old persons (storytellers) and listened to stories.. It is claimed that when the narrator had given his share and started showing signs of fatigue, he would suddenly cry out: “Sirandann! Sampèque!” It was the signal for the beginning of a game that opened with a series of brief and direct problems. He started with the simple ones that were least difficult and well known. They called forth immediate and correct replies even from the youngest children. After some rounds, came the more difficult queries, which would stretch their intellectual powers to the utmost. In the second half of the 20th century, as people gained access to free education after independence and new forms of leisure were introduced in the form of the radio and the television, this tradition started to be more limited as a social event. It was practiced in the family during cyclonic periods, usually after electricity cuts. Riddles were also used during family gatherings as a means to entertain children and adolescents. In the 21st century, the social practice of riddles is more limited and restricted to communication between two generations, grand-parents and grand-children during family gatherings. As for the cyclonic periods, electricity cuts are now very rare. Usually, leisure activities tend to be more aged-based rather than family-based. Television programmes, namely films, remain a popular leisure. The younger generation is more interested in multi-media and ICT-related leisure activities. Children, adolescents and young adults are more interested in computer games and activities like social chat through internet facilities. |                                                                                                                                                                         |

|     | In Rodrigues a Sirandann is a devinet (riddle) or zedmot (pun) in Rodriguan Creole. It was a leisure activity and had a pedagogical function as well. Before bedtime, as a family activity, in each household, people spent time inventing and narrating Sirandann. In keeping with Moreau C. (1999), the riddles on the island varied in structure; there were short and long sirandann. The short version was a two words riddle and was the most widespread. The long version looked like a short story. Although it was primarily a form of entertainment between friends that cut across all age groups, the author also pointed out that there were people whose activity were to narrate riddles during mortuary wakes but it is a practice that has disappeared nowadays. After the religious prayers and songs, people used to narrate riddles to entertain and also as a means to relieve people's pain. An informant, Mr. Rosaire Perrine, also mentioned that specific riddles are told on the occasion of the opening of net fishing season.                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 1.5            | Short description An enigma is a perplexing speech or text that is difficult to understand or mysterious, puzzling, ambiguous, or hard to work out. Specifically, an enigma is a riddle generally expressed in a metaphorical or allegorical language. Ingenuity and careful thinking are required to find its solution. In the past, in Mauritius, enigmas were used during social gatherings among workers (slaves and indentured labourers) in the evening during leisure time. In the second half of the 20th century, after independence, as people gained access to free education and new forms of leisure were introduced in the form of the radio and the television, this tradition started to be limited as a social event. A Few enigmas were used during family gatherings as a means to entertain children and adolescents. In the 21st century, the social practice of enigmas is more limited. Nowadays, enigmas are rarely used in the family during a family gathering. They are rarely used at family functions or parties for leisure and/or to have fun. |                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 1.5.             | Short description: A folktale is a story forming initially part of an oral tradition and is more frequently used in its verbal form than in its written form. It is passed down from one generation to another and enriched by different “varieties” according to time and place. It refers to universal and timeless themes and tends to move from a particular community and be used nationally. Sometimes a folktale validates certain aspects of a community culture. Fairy tales and fables feature characters such as fairies, elves, goblins, dwarves, giants, mermaids who use magic or enchantments. With such tales usually having a happy ending. Tales and fables featuring kings, queens, princes and princesses appeal to children as from a young age. Usually tales also comprise magical objects and/or animals and/or creatures. After some adventures, the hero returns to the castle and, often, there is a happy ending. A few stories depict the harsh living conditions of farmers and people in rural areas. Tales for children are used for leisure. They have been transmitted by both by word-of-mouth and in written form locally |                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

| 1.5            | Short descriptionA legend is a traditional tale handed down by word-of-mouth and it is believed to have an historical basis. Legends are grounded in history and there exists evidence that the characters of some heroes are based on the existence of actual historical figures. However, over time, many new elements have been added to the original life stories and events. Because of their historical importance, legends have very often been preserved in their written form. Legends have been transmitted from generation to another. Some have had a permanent fame while others tend to be forgotten.In Mauritius, there exists one legend that has experienced a change of status as its historical basis and truth has been ascertained by archaeological research. It is the case for La Montagne du Morne Brabant. |                                                                                                                                                                                             |

There was such a village at the foot of Murya (Head) Pahar (Mountain). Its name was Dhara Nagri. People there used to sell milk. At that time, there was no car and no bus. So they had to go past the mountain to sell the milk. They passed in the jungle and then came back to the village when it was already very dark. One day, while he was passing by, a milk seller heard a beautiful song. He went to have a look. And he saw many beautiful fairies who were dancing. He watched them as long as he wanted to and was very happy. But one fairy saw him. She told him that he could watch them every day but he should not say anything to any human being. |

| 1.5          | Short descriptionA myth is a traditional story, concerning the early history of a people or explaining a natural or social phenomenon, and typically involving supernatural beings or events. Myths are used to explain community practices and beliefs, traditions and customs, rituals and ceremonies, ideals and ethical standpoints. They are accepted as being firmly grounded in reality of the past without any historical evidence and usually provide information about some human beings who lived during ancient periods. Many myths have been preserved in written form due to their importance. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |

Ou bahut accha aur oudaar dil ke rahal, imaandaar rahal aur satyavadi bhi. Okar rani ke naam Taramati rahal aur okar ego beta rahal jeker naam Rohitashwa rahal. Rishi Vishwamitra Raja Harishchand ke bollan: - Ham aib tohar darbar me tohar se mile. Raja ji bollan : Ji Maharaj. Awasya. Saal beet gail. Rishi nai ailan. Ta raja bhoula gailan. Ek din Rishi Vishwamitra prastoot hoilan Raja ke darbar me. Aur Raja ke bollan: Ham ail hai hamar dakshina lewe. Hamke tohar sab raj paat da. Ta Raja bollan : Han Rishi ji! Jo agiyan! Ta Rishi bollan : Hamke tohar sab kosh da. Raja sab mantri mandal ke bolaillan aur sawach ke Rishi ke sab kosh dedelan. Etna bas nai rahal. Rishi bollan: Ab tohar haija pari konon adhikar nai ba. Hai kapra bhi jowon pehenle hawa, i bhi chahela outare ke. Hamke tohar langot bhi da. Raja ke paral raj pat, ghar doowar chor ke jai ke. Apnan priy patni ke bhi paral chor dewe ke. Ego bara admi lage Taramati gailan kaam kare, ego dasi ban kar. Aur ounkar laika bhi apan ma ke sath gailan. Oudhar Harishchand bhi ego shamshan me kaam karat rahlan. Ek din, malik Rohitashwa ke baag me bhejlan doo teen go phool toure ke. Bechara ke saanp das delak. Laika ta chilai lagal aur behos gir gail aur mar gail. Taramati dawrle ailan aur laika ke godi me lelan. Ounkara ta koi nai rahal, ta ounkare paral laika ke leke shamshan me jai ke. Ta howja pari Harishchand jowon Raja rahal shamshaan ke darbaan rahal. Ta Harishchand Taramati se bollan: Bina paisa ke ham tohra ijazat nai dewab bhitre awe ke. Bina kafan ke nai sakal jai okar sharir ke daphnawe. Tab Taramati apnan anchra ke phaar ke kafan banailan. Jab sari ke phare laglan, ta char char char sounail. Dharti dagmagail lagal aur aakash hile lagal. Ta ego karishma hogail. Ounkar laika ke phir se praan mil gail. Harishchand apnan patni aur laika ke ab pehchaan lelan. Tabe samay Vishwamitra ji haija ailan aur bahot prasand hoilan. Rajaa ke bollan: Ham tohar parikshaa lewat rahli, ki kahaan tak tou satyavadi hawa. Aaj se tohar naam Satyavadi Harishchand rahi. Aur Raja Harishchand ke ounkaar darbar phir se ounkara mil gail. In English - Alexander the Great |

He was trapped in a hunter's net. He was shouting loudly for help.He said: Help! Help!A goat passed by but he was so afraid of the lion that he ran away. Then a monkey passed by. He also asked himself what had happened but he ran away too. Then a rat came out of his rat hole.He asked the lion: O King! I will get you out of the net, but don't eat me.The lion said: O Uncle rat! You are so small. How will you remove me from the net?The rat got to work immediately and started biting the net. The lion came out of the net and made friends with the rat.And he said: I thought you were so small, but you saved me.MORALITY: Never underestimate anyone. - Les trois aveugles et l'éléphant- The Blind man and the elephantIl était une fois trois hommes qui étaient aveugles. Il toucha le tronc avec ses mains et s'exclama : Un éléphant ressemble à un serpent. Le troisième aveugle s'approcha à son tour de l'animal. Il toucha une oreille avec ses mains et s'exclama : Un éléphant ressemble à un éventail. Les trois hommes discutèrent pendant longtemps, chacun pensant avoir raison. Bien qu'ils aient chacun raison, les trois se trompaient. MORALITE: Souvent les gens se disputent car ils sont ignorants. [Once upon a time, there were three blind men. One day, they walked next to an elephant. The first blind man went closer to the animal. He touched its tummy with his hand and exclaimed: An elephant is as hard as a wall. The second blind man went closer to the animal. He touched its trunk with his hand and exclaimed: An elephant is as hard as a wall. The third blind man went closer to the animal. He touched its ear with his hand and exclaimed: An elephant is as hard as a wall. The three men discussed for a long time, each one strongly believing that he was right. Even if each one was right, the three of them were wrong. MORALITY: Very often, people fight against each other because of ignorance.] - Zistwar peser ki ti donn enn kan a pes enn ti garson byen pov- Story of the fisherman who gave a fishing rod to a boy Enn zour lapli, dan enn fami byen mizer, enn mama ti byen malad. Li dir so ti garson al dimann enn ti sarite pou kapav gayn enn manze pou tanto. Garson al diman sarite... Li pas kot larivyer. Li dimann bann peser ki ti pe lapes, enn posson pou li kapav amenn pou so mama. Lerla enn vieux peser apel li... Ek dan plas enn posson, li donn li enn lalinn ek labouet. Ti garson la pa finn tro konpran... Lerla linn say lapes enn kou... E apre enn ti mama li koumans gayn posson... Lerla lin konpran aksyon vye peser-là... Depi sa zour-là, zame ti garson-là ni so mama pa finn mank manze. MORALITE: Konesans, se pli gran kado. [One rainy day, in a poor family, the mother was very sick and asked her son to go and beg in order to have some food for dinner. The son went on his way to beg and passed near a river. He asked the fishermen who were fishing, for a fish so that he could bring it home for his mother. Then, an old fisherman called him... And instead of giving him a fish, he gave him a fishing line and a bait. The young boy did not really understand the fisherman. Then, he tried to fish... And after a while, he started capturing fish... Only then, he realized the meaning of the fisherman's action... Since that day, neither the boy nor his mother lacked food. MORALITY: Knowledge is the best gift that one can ever receive.] - Kutta aur apni chaya ki kahani/ lobhi kuttey ki kahani- Story of the dog who saw its reflection in the water Ek baar ek kutta apné mooh mein roti liyé ek naddi ké paas sé guzar raha tha. Oos né pani mein apni chaya dekhi aur socha ki koi doosra kutta roti liyé jaa raha hai. Ooski roti chinné ké liyé, apni roti chor kar kutta paani mein kud para. Phir, ooské haath kuch nahin aaya. Jo bhi ooské paas tha woh bhi kho diya. [One day, a dog carrying a piece of bread in its mouth was passing by a river. The dog saw its reflection in the river water and thought that there is another dog running away with bread. The dog jumped in the river to have the other bread but ultimately, lost everything. |

| MORALITE : Kokin sitan kokin, ziska zot kokin dimunn mor. Sa mem so finisyon zistwar. A lady was in her house with her lover. Her husband had left at night and did not inform her when he would be back. Early morning, the cock crows and she heard a knock at the door. She asked: Who is it? Her husband replied: I am back. Then she told her lover: Go quickly and hide yourself in the big lazar at the corner of the house. The lover went to hide. When the lady opened the door, her husband asked her whether she had put water on fire to make coffee. His wife told him: I am going to do it now. How comes you are back so quickly? - I have found the guy I wanted to meet, and I came back immediately. That's all. The water was boiling hot. She put water on top of the coffee; the rest she filled with water – I don't know what he remembered – he put the coffee in the lazar where the lover was hidden. The poor guy did not make a noise, he was astounded because of the boiling water, he became cold and he died... After he died, his mouth remained open as if he was smiling. Early morning, when her husband went out to work, she told her lover: - Come out quickly, now he is gone, but he may come back again. Her lover did not make a move. But come out quickly, I am telling you!... Oh! Oh! I am talking to you and you are smiling! She observed that he did not stop smiling. She picked him by the hair, she takes him out of the lazar; only then did she understand that he was dead. My God! My God! Oh my God! What will I do now with a dead body in the house! She kept on thinking over and over again! There was an old donkey that used to stroll around in the yard; she took the dead body, she tied it to the donkey, and she untied the donkey. The donkey started to run; it went into the yard of a rich man who had planted maize. The donkey started eating, it only had herbs before. While it was eating, the lady saw a man on the donkey and the latter was eating maize. Hey you, Sir! What are you doing? You allow your animal to eat my maize and you are sitting on your donkey! Can't you stop him destroying my plants? The man did not reply, he kept smiling. But! I am talking to you and you look at me! Then the lady shouted : Husband! The husband came along with a stick, his wife told him: Would you believe this? I am talking to this man asking him not to allow his animal to eat my plant; he looks at me and keeps smiling! The husband knocked the lover with his stick: Poc! The man fell from the donkey. When the husband saw what had happened, he said: - Oh my God! My God! Oh my wife! What have we done! We have killed someone: What did we do! |

Paise loot nahin jayega aur ache kaam ke liye stamaal hoga. [One day, a king gave three rupees to his minister and asked him to purchase three things that would be firstly useful here, secondly there and thirdly, neither here nor there. The minister came after some time and reported that he purchased cakes for one rupee, which have been useful here. Secondly, he said that he gave one rupee to a beggar. Hence this good act will be rewarded in heaven (there) and he spent one rupee in gambling which will be of help neither here nor there. MORALITY: One should spend judiciously so that money is not squandered and be used for some good cause.] - The Fox and the Goat [Aesop's Fable] One day, a fox fell into a deep well and could find no means of escape. A goat, overcome with thirst, came to the same well, and seeing the Fox, inquired if the water was good. Concealing his sad plight under a merry guise, the Fox indulged in a lavish praise of the water, saying it was excellent beyond measure, and encouraging him to descend. The Goat, mindful only of his thirst, thoughtlessly jumped down, but just as he drank, the Fox informed him of the difficulty they were both in and suggested a scheme for their common escape. "If," said he, "you will place your forefeet upon the wall and bend your head, I will run up your back and escape, and will help you out afterwards." The Goat readily assented and the Fox leaped upon his back. Steadying himself with the Goat's horns, he safely reached the mouth of the well and made off as fast as he could. When the Goat questioned him for breaking his promise, he turned around and cried out, "You foolish old fellow! If you had as many brains in your head as you have hairs in your beard, you would never have gone down before you had inspected the way up, nor have exposed yourself to dangers from which you had no means of escape." MORALITY: Look before you leap. Common in Agalega <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>- Galoupe kapav cogne marse pa empess arive (Running can knock, walking does not prevent one from reaching).</li> <li>- Krwa ce ki ou pa krwa ce ki ou pa krwar krwar (Expect the unexpected).</li> </ul> |

|  | – The Old woman and the thieves [Pahlad Ramsurrun]An old woman's house is ransacked. As she is intelligent and courageous, she finds a means to outwit the thieves. She bites a thief's tongue when he climbs up a tree. His friends are frightened as he cannot talk. She recovers her belongings. In French – Histoire de la femme qui perd son époux et sa fille – Une femme perd son époux et sa petite fille en même temps. Elle est pauvre et ne peut acheter qu'un seul cercueil. La petite fille est placée entre les jambes de son défunt époux. Alors qu'on va procéder à la fermeture du cercueil, la femme s'écrie : 'Pa toi ki mo sagrin. To pa pou mank moi. Seki to enan ant to de lazam la ki mo sagrin. Mo pa pou retrouv sa ankor'. [Ce n'est pas toi qui va me manquer. Je ne suis pas triste de te perdre. Je suis triste pour ce qui se trouve entre tes deux jambes. Je ne retrouverai plus jamais ça.] – Histoire de la fille qui n'arrive pas à se marier – Une famille habitant à « La Plaine » n'arrive pas à marier sa fille unique. Beaucoup de prétendants se présentent mais ils fuient tous et ne reviennent plus ni le dimanche suivant, ni le dimanche d'après. Ils ne reviennent plus jamais. Un « vieux gens » d'une trentaine d'années ne trouvait de jeune fille pour se marier. Il entend parler de la famille qui habite « La Plaine ». Il décide alors de tenter sa chance puisque personne ne veut épouser la fille. En arrivant là-bas, tout semble normal. Les parents sont souriants et l'accueillent bien chaleureusement. La jeune fille est tellement belle dans sa robe du dimanche ! Lorsque vient l'heure du thé, la future belle-mère offre de servir du thé à son futur gendre. Il voudrait un peu de lait dans son thé. Alors la dame reprend sa tasse et sort de la pièce. C'est à travers un miroir que le « vieux gen » aperçoit sa future belle-mère enlevant ses sur-vêtements et extraire du lait de sa poitrine en visant directement la tasse. Il préfère mourir « vieux gens » que de se marier... – Histoire du jeune homme et de ses sous-vêtements – Un jeune homme va se marier. Pour l'occasion, sa mère lui achète quinze mètres de tissu pour lui confectionner des sous-vêtements neufs, des « kalson ». Mais comme il doit se rendre chez la fille le dimanche suivant, alors sa mère coupe un mètre du tissu et lui coud un sous-vêtement neuf. Le jeune homme s'habille et tout fièrement, il se rend chez la fille. A un certain moment, il ressent le besoin de se rendre au « latrinn » (aux toilettes) et il ne sait pas que sa promise est en train de le suivre par curiosité. Tout d'un coup, le garçon se retourne. Il est sans pantalon et il porte un « kalson ». Il voit sa dulcinée. Il lui dit : Pa gagn traka, ena zis enn met là. Enan ankor katorz met pe atann lakaz-là. [Ne t'inquiète pas, il n'y a qu'un mètre en ce moment. Il y a encore quatorze mètres qui attendent à la maison.] En entendant cela, la jeune fille rentre en hurlant et annonce qu'elle ne se mariera jamais. – Histoire du jeune homme et du potiron – Un jeune homme va chez la famille de sa fiancée mais il rate l'autobus pour le retour. Alors, il reste pour le dîner et doit rentrer chez lui le lendemain matin. Avant le dîner, il a envie de faire « la grosse commission » (de se rendre aux toilettes). Il se rend dans le champ de « giromons » (potirons). Il fait presque noir et sa future belle-mère va chercher un potiron mur pour la cuisson. Puisqu'elle ne voit pas |

| 1.5 | Short description A song is a short musical composition of words with music intended or adapted for singing and brings about an emotional response. A nursery song is a child song that is sung or hummed by parents and caregivers all over the world. Nursery songs were used by maids (working for the upper social class) or mothers (other social classes) when they were with their children, namely during nap time or sleeping time. Such songs are transmitted orally from one generation to another from mother to daughter/son. Nowadays, these songs are also used in nurseries and kindergartens. A most famous lullaby known to most Mauritians is La rivyer taniers which probably dates back to early French period:  Mo pase la rivyer Taniers Mo zoinn enn vie grand mama Mo dimann li ki li fer la, Li dir moi li lapas Kabo, Wai, Wai, mes enfants, Faut travailler pour gagner son pain.  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |

| 1.5 | Short description A child song is sung, hummed or recited by parents or other members of the family and caregivers all over the world. They were used by maids (working for upper social class) or mothers (other social classes) when they were with their children. Such songs are transmitted orally from one generation to another from parents and members of the family to daughter/son. Nowadays, these songs are also used in nurseries, kindergartens and schools. Some songs are patriotic and/or reveal the history of the country. Others are based on rhythm and repetition. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |

 The ship has left together with my earrings, my nose ring, my necklace, my anklets, my bracelets, my sari, our dhoti, our turbans, Our scared books like the Ramayana, Geeta, Puraanas, Koran...)*

- Dada ji ke posal pasal lalka chiraiya
 Oural jala, Oural jala, lalka chiraiya, Oho Ram, oural jala.
 Ghorwa chahral awe raja ji ke betwa
 Mare ho delan lalka chiraiya, Oho Ram, Mare ho delan
( My grandfather's red bird which he nourished well keep flying, oh Ram...)

| Mahil jaychandwa se bachihe re bhaiya | Stay away from Mahils and Jaichands, O brother |

Oka Boka Tin to loka
 Lawa lathi chanan katey
 Chanan mein ka ba
 Ijal bijal paan phul
 Hay dariya pachkadey

Tati tati puriya
 Gheew mein chaboriya
 Ham khayi ki bhowji khai

*Bhowji potarangiya
Dhar kaan mamoriya*

pyaali layé aur
chanda mama aayé daur*

*Jangal kat kiyo maidana
Khet banaye sahit sivana
Upal bitor sajaye sima
Kha kar dal bhat aru pima
Ganne ki ho phasal tayari
Kat dhoi mula me dari
Per par kar rab banai*

*(Our dear Moon Uncle who lives far away,
cooks cakes for us
He eats in a silver plate and serves our baby in a porcelain plate
Baby's plate falls and breaks
Moon Uncle gets annoyed
With more porcelain plate coming,
Moon uncle comes back running.)*

*Oh see! Here’s a chirp and a cardinal
 They are flirting on the filao tree.
 Oh see! Three white rabbits with their red eyes
 Playing on green grass near the water
 Oh see! Four chicks, white, black, yellow and brown
 Are all playing in the soil looking for earth
 worms?
 Beat your drum, drummer!
 Beat your ravann, ‘ravann beater’!
 The goat’s skin is chirping...!*

It is characterized by an extremely developed artistic form through the use of language, sounds and rhythm in different creative ways to express an imaginative interpretation of a living being, an object or an idea. Usually a poem brings about an emotional response. A poem can also be sung. In the past, in Mauritius, poems were used in specific cultural contexts by Franco-Mauritians and during some celebrations. It belongs to a tradition of free oral expression in “salons”. This took place spontaneously in an informal context. Voluntary members of the family would perform in front of the whole family or among friends. Each one would sing, play a musical instrument, make a speech or recite a poem. If there is a piano, every one would sing with musical accompaniment. Such events were inherited from the French Revolution period. Many “cercles et sociétés littéraires” were created, among others, la « Table Ovale ». Poets would meet to discuss and recite poems. The country was nicknamed « pays des poètes ». At the end of the 19th century and beginning of the 20th century, some Franco-Mauritian poets would write and send poems to each other. Poets of cultural mixed also started the same tradition. “Récital de poesie” of famous poets occasionally take place in a formal context. At the end of the 20th century, Mauritian poets and musicians from different ethnic groups have revived an ancient custom of poem recital by using different cultural platforms and have been trying to sensitise the population through the recording of recitals and free access on YouTube. Poetry tradition is considered as one of the most vibrant in the Indian Ocean and on the African continent. A group of contemporary Mauritian poets have set up associations to regularly promote the recitation of poems of both ancient and contemporary poets, known as “récital de poésie”. There are some other groups too. Recitals are very often accompanied by music, guitar and/or ravanne. Oral poetry refers to oral poems that are transmitted without the help of the writing medium. Love songs, parables, theatres and folktales were the most popular forms of oral poetry on the island. Rodrigues was an oral society with a rich repertoire of oral poetry; it was famous for its conteurs that enjoyed a special status in the social and cultural local scene. But, with the introduction of compulsory academic education, the expansion of communication channels between Rodrigues and Mauritius (and even beyond local territories) and modern audiovisual equipments, oral poetry has lost its importance and given way to modern practices. Example: following the expansion of literacy in English and French, Rodrigues has moved from an oral society to one based on the |                                                                                   |

He testified that sometimes he likes to stride along the streets of Port-Mathurin narrating philosophical tales. His inspiration comes from his guardian or protector, the spirit of a dead storyteller. For example, during the interview, on the spot he narrated a folktale about why Rodriguans "dir bozour" (greeting people). In line with his statements, storytelling is not only a mere entertainment but it was a means to educate people and to pass on a message to the population about life, nature and interpersonal interactions to name a few. People had to ponder over the meaning of the tale or story so as to find out the message and moral values that the teller wanted to convey. In most oral societies, the storyteller played a social and cultural role; he can be considered as the local philosopher and educator. Rodrigues is known for its "rhythmic poetry" known as Slam of which they are the current world champion, having won the same title in Paris, France in 2017. These are original works by the artists which are composed instantly. According to Google dictionary, "Slam Poetry is a type of competition where people read their poems without props, costumes, or music. After performing, they receive scores (0-10) from 5 randomly selected judges. The judges can be anyone: they don't even need to be poets! Scores are awarded based on how much each judge likes a poem". This is a new development in Rodrigues that shows the strong story telling element within the Rodriguan society that played significant social and cultural role with oral poets being considered philosophers and educators as mentioned above. Slam is not only restricted to Rodrigues but is found among the other Mauritians those of indentured descents. This further demonstrates the acceptance and appreciation of using poetry for telling stories, education and for social and cultural reasons. |                                                                            |

| 1.5 | Short description Geet-Gawai is a pre-wedding ceremony now performed one or two days before the actual wedding and comes as a precursor to other rituals and practices involved in a wedding. In early days Geet-Gawai was performed for whole week. It is a combination of rituals, prayers, songs, music and dance which is also a living means of expression of the Bhojpuri language and oral traditions. There are several steps in Geet-Gawai performance which starts where women of the family and neighbourhood dressed in traditional dresses come together in the groom's or bride's house to be seated in a semi-circular fashion. The first ritual is the 'lagan-Kholna' where five married women, with their veil (dupatta) on their head sit on their feet in circle or semi-circle. They sort out tumeric pieces, unhusked rice grass and money contained in a piece of cloth, while the women around sing songs called 'Lagan-Geet'. The (Lagan Geet) is followed by, 'Sumiran' and 'Sandhya' in honour of gods and goddesses. The above is followed by sanctification of the performance place and house called the 'dharti bandhai' that is performed also through songs. It symbolises purification of the place and tying up the earth asking permission to dance on her. The ritual is followed by the 'dholak-puja' as a sign of paying respect to the musical instruments and is a ritual between the mother of the groom or bride and the leading drum player. After the above rituals the songs are accompanied by musical instruments such as the dholak (two-headed-drum) and household items as the 'thali' (brass plate), spoons (chamchah) struck against the rim of a 'lota' (brass container) and two wooden pieces to produce rhythmic beats. The performance continues with 'Suhag-geet' songs and finally leading to the 'Jhumar'. The Jhumar is a lively vibrating performance of song, dance and music performance. This sees the joining in of young women and girls initially inactive, swaying with the beats of the drum as they move around with short steps and enact the lyrics. Formerly performed by women only, the Geet Gawai is today also practiced by men. The Geet-Gawai performance is a lively and vibrant social and cultural activity, performance where dressing, rituals, music, songs and dance are further enriched by serving traditional snacks, hot drinks, ginger powder and 'paan' (betel leaves with lime, cloves and cardamon) prepared fresh on the spot. People present are served these items regularly. The performance ends with the distribution of soaked black chickpeas to take home. Geet-Gawai moves beyond family to all Mauritians in the form of 'Gamat' and stage performances. This extension of the element in public domains is vibrant and enjoyed by everybody. There are non-Bhojpuri speakers who perform Geet Gawai. During the consultations, a number of people, who were previously depressed either due to death in family or some unfortunate events, confessed to reaching a state of happiness or non-depression after Geet-Gawai performance. Several types of songs form part of the Geet-Gawai, among them: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• LaganGeet</li> </ul> This is the time when the women present declare that this auspicious date has been selected by the priest in the presence of both families (bride and groom) for the wedding of the children and ask for the community/ those gathered to bless the bride and the groom. E.g “Binti se bolelan mahadev suno ho gaurav devi..” <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Sumiran also known as Dēbi-Debtā ke Geet (songs of divinities)</li> </ul> Sumiran is a collective devotional singing and natural human expression of love and joy for God or the Divinity. One of the hallmarks of Bhojpuri Sumiran is the singing with passion and devotion, irrespective of the quality of the singers’ voice but singing putting their heart into it and carrying with them the listeners to the height of devotion and spirituality. |  | Sandhya songs to invoke gods and goddesses, are not accompanied by musical instruments. Their presence is solicited till the completion of the wedding ceremony. e.g <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>i. Sanjhā Debi ke Geet (Bhojpuri songs invoking the blessings of the Goddess of Dusk (Lakshmi) who brings in prosperity to the homes).</li> </ol> Dharti-bandhai During the dharti-bandhai deities are invoked and they are requested to stay in this place, purify it and fill it with good vibes so that invited guests will take pleasure in assisting all the wedding rituals and will leave the place only after blessing the married couple. The Mother Earth is also asked permission to perform on it as the performance afterwards will be accompanied by dance. Examples of ‘dharti –bandhai’ songs are below: Dholak-puja The dholok-puja is symbolical and it pays respect to the instrument which will be resonating on this auspicious occasion till the end to create a joyful atmosphere. It is a ritual between the mother of the bride/ groom and the Geetharine playing the dholak/ lead drummer assisted by other women. (Rice grains and money is offered to lead drummer). The mother plays the instrument symbolically to start it.. Examples of dholak puja songs: Suhag -Geet Suhag is sung for gods and goddesses, acknowledging their presence and calling them by their names. Jhoomar / Jhumar Bhojpuri Jhoomar or Jhumar is a lively form of music,song and dance. The word ‘Jhoomar’ comes from Jhoom, which means swaying, with the music. Though the content of these songs vary, they are usually based on love and emotional themes making Jhumar Geet music, dance and songs of ecstasy. The jhoomar has highly influenced the Gamat, originally only performed by male but today including women. The Jhumar, performed on festive occasions including wedding ceremonies, is a living demonstration of happiness and merry-making. The Jhoomar Geet recreates everyday activities including ploughing of the field, sowing of seeds, harvesting and household scenes reflecting the past and the present. Dressed in colourful traditional costumes, the women dance happily, singing and clapping their hands with the beats of the dholak and the lota, as they gracefully move in circular motion. Many themes are covered in performing the Jhoomar songs, music and dance, each with its own distinctive rhythm. The performance may last for several hours. As many Indo-Mauritians are fans and amateur performers of Bollywood music, the Jhoomar has recently been exhibiting some adaptation and incorporation. |

| 4.2 | Threats to the transmission The Media Industry, television, radio, internet and the commercial Bollywood music has both negative and positive impact on the transmission of Geet-Gawai. If negatively adapted, it may replace the current Mauritian Geet-Gawai practices in public performances. However, the media may impact positively as they provide an interesting and dynamic medium and intersection of growth and appreciation of the element by a larger and youthful segment of the society. Hand in hand, the involvement of grass-root modern communicators working with communities will ensure transmission of the element, appreciating and adapting concurrently traditional modes of transmission and enabling the forthcoming generations to continue to relate to local communities. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

|  |  | Today there are numerous formal and informal groups that have emerged within the 9 districts of Mauritius as hired performers of the element in several occasions and events, including but not limited to weddings. There is at least one Geet-Gawai group in every Mauritian village and or town, who practices this as a trade. Several performing groups are involved in the teaching of the youth including the Geet-Gawai School at Petit Raffray and the Des Premi Group at Mahebourg that specialises in moulding the youth by using the knowledge of the elderly and experienced bearers and practitioners. The dissemination of Geet-Gawai including Bhojpuri songs is also done through popular websites such as the BSU website, ensuring adoption, revitalisation and practice by younger generation. The Bhojpuri language through Geet Gawai is being promoted by BSU, in schools since 2012 and through a dedicated Bhojpuri television channel (Bhojpuri Channel) which broadcast Bhojpuri music including Geet-Gawai and Jhumar since 2013. Today courses on Bhojpuri Language and Culture are taught at the MGI, UoM, primary and secondary schools such as Professor Basdeo Bissoondoyal Flacq. With the setting up of the Mahatma Gandhi Institute (MGI) in 1976, government created a department of Bhojpuri Folklore and oral traditions, further enhancing the appreciation of the element. BSU has set up numerous schools of Geet- Gawai (more than 20) across the Island starting with the school of Geet Gawai in Petit Raffray that has been in operation since 2014 with students' numbers rising from 15 to 300 within 3 months, demonstrating the elements appeal and viability. AGTF, dedicated to the researching of indentured labourer history in Mauritius, also has the responsibility to carry out research, protect, promote and disseminate the ICH including the Bhojpuri language and culture. AGTF is continuously collecting information on Indentured labour and updating its inventory including documentation of Geet Gawai looking at its evolution and any changes that take place. |

| 1.5                                  | Short description The sante patrimwann are monodic songs (single solo line or single melodic line), composed sometimes of no more than two sentences that have been transmitted across generations. These include various categories of songs such as romans, lullabies, work songs, etc. These songs defy time and have been transmitted by the elders who left their individual imprint without loss of their didactic character. However as these were transmitted orally through generations, parts of the lyrics have been lost and only some fragments have been preserved. The songs that date back to time immemorial and form part of collective memory are of unknown origins and it is difficult to attribute them only to a Mauritian heritage as one finds similar melodies in the other islands of the Indian Ocean. As such they can be described as intercultural heritage of the South West Indian Ocean. The sante patrimwann often takes the form of a plaintive or sentimental song and speak of the world and of the place and role of the individual in the world. For example, “Ayo Liza” and “Lea” reflect the desperation felt by men who have been rejected by their lovers, and address universal themes, such as “mother”, “death”, “despair”, and “love”. |                                                                                                             |

|     | These songs emerged out of the contacts between different cultural groups and no particular origin can be established. , They are therefore heritage from the encounter of various groups of immigrants who came to Mauritius. Similar tunes are found in islands of the South West Indian Ocean area sharing the same historical and cultural background. It can however be stated that, as far as the texts are concerned, they are Mauritian creations.                                                                                                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

The instruments basically consist of the ravann, the maravann and the triyang . The Sega tipik can be grouped in 2 categories, the formal and the informal performances. The formal performance is often choreographed and performers wear uniforms where generally women wear long and large skirts often white and men wear rolled pants, colourful or plain shirts and straw hat. Presently, Sega Tipik Morisien is performed during folkloric festivals, national events like National Day celebrations, the commemoration of the Abolition of Slavery, Festival Kreol, and Music Day and in also in hotels. However, sega tipik is viewed in its simple form in informal performances. It is often performed in family events in the backyard of the house, on the beach or any place of gathering of family members and friends. The traditional performance of Sega Tipik Morisien is divided into several stages: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• The heating of the ravann next on the fire to tune it</li> <li>• The call of the ravann (lapel), given by a soloist and that motivates people to gather around the instrumentalists.</li> <li>• The song, often an improvised threnody of antiphonal<sup>1</sup> or responsorial<sup>2</sup> form and the lyrics are simple and repetitive.</li> <li>• The roll (roulad), which is danced by the assembly and punctuated by acclamations dynamising the dance (called choule).</li> </ul> The ravann players play different beats: the premietanbour gives the tempo; the others will sizone (playing on the edge of the ravann to give a high-pitched sound). The rhythm of Sega Tipik Morisien is an ambiguity between duple and ternary rhythms with a syncopated effect (off beats). Singing, even if improvised, has to adhere to certain codes: the person singing will introduce the theme of his song for people to hear what he has to say. As soon as the singer sings “ola e o ti le lae” (onomatopoeia), the dancers prepare to enter the circle formed around the |                                                                                                      |

<sup>2</sup>It consists in the enunciation of a series of sentences by a soloist that are answered by a choir (the response). This response may be sung in unison or in parallel intervals of fourths or fifths.

They dance within the circle formed by musicians and assembly without making any physical contact. The women dancers hold their skirts in their hands (Vann Vane). They move their hands and the hips and move around with short steps. Sega Tipik Morisien is ultimately bound to the history of Mauritius, taking its roots in the early 18th French colonisation and settlement of Mauritius. Sega Tipik Morisien is a legacy of the slave population born in the context of a colonial society. It was first mentioned by the traveller Bernadin de Saint Pierre in the 1770s as 'Tschiega' and in 1827 De Freycinet also refers it to a performance he observed as 'chéga' or 'tchéga', the music of black people. During slavery sega tipik was a way to externalize the physical pain and moral repressions, it had a cathartic function. Sega Tipik Morisien was a cry from the soul of the slaves attempting to transcend the miseries of repressed freedom. It also expresses a yearning for forgotten homelands as well as the universal desire for joy and happiness. Whenever possible slaves gathered to sing their misery and dance, to forget their inhuman living conditions. Formerly, Sega Tipik Morisien was also performed during funerary rites and to communicate with ancestors. This "Ritual Sega" started to be organised in the courtyards during Sega nights (sware Sega), and became a 'backyard music' secluded in the private space as these rituals were not accepted by Roman Catholic Church. From the 1975 recordings of story teller Nelzir Ventre, they were still being performed in the yard with guests present as he spoke of rituals and magical (sorcery) practices. However, this "Ritual Sega" is no more practiced. After the abolition of slavery, Sega Tipik Morisien songs and dances were considered as a deviant behaviour. It was also perceived negatively by the free or coloured population. Sega Tipik Morisien musicians and singers were called 'tcholo' (low class buffon) or 'nwar moutcha' as stated by Fanfan. By the end of the 19th century, many settlements of ex-slaves and Liberated Africans emerged in coastal districts, far from the sugar plantations. In these regions, Sega Tipik Morisien started to be organised in the courtyards during Sega Tipik nights (Sware Sega Tipik), and became a 'backyard music' secluded in the private space. Sega Tipik Morisien was mainly organised in front of the house or in front of the shop (boutik) during Sega Tipik nights, as Josiane Kasambo, the doyenne of female Sega Tipik Morisien singer recounts. As far as she can remember, Sega Tipik Morisien was performed in front of one's house and was called the Sega Tipik divan laport. From the 1950s, Sega Tipik Morisien began to enter the main stream and open to every social class. A historic moment took place on 24th October 1964, when 'La nuit du Séga' (The Sega Night) was held at Le Morne Village. This was the first public demonstration of Sega Tipik Morisien that finally gave official recognition to the Traditional Mauritian Sega. It was from then that Mauritius discovered Ti-Frer, 64 years old, singing Fidelia and Roseda; other emblematic figures such as Michel Legris and Fanfan also became popular. As from then, Sega Tipik Morisien was being commercialised in Mauritius across the island in hotels. Presently, Sega Tipik Morisien is performed during folkloric festivals, national events like National Day celebrations, and the commemoration of the Abolition of Slavery, Music Day and in hotels. The traditional instruments are still used and the lyrics have been adapted to contemporary Mauritian context. |

| 2.1 | Associated tangible elements; 1- Musical instruments: Ravann: This is both a member of the membranophone family and that of idiophones. The ravann is a percussion instrument of some 60cm in diameter and 5cm thickness. The musician is usually either seated on the ground either with the knee to the ground so that the other leg serves as support for the instrument. The left wrist (if the musician is right-handed), placed on the upper part of the ravann, ensures that it is stable while leaving the hand free to make short beats termed fwet (whip), with the little finger and the ring finger and sometimes the middle finger. The right hand hits the middle with full force or at the edges with various strokes. Maravann: A rectangular box mad of sugarcane flowers, wood or iron with seeds inside. The instrumentalist makes use of the sound value of the seeds moving inside the empty cavity, when it is shaken: the maravann is held horizontally and is shaken from left to right. Triyang: The triyang (triangle) is an idiophone. It consists of steel or iron rod bent to the form a triangle with an opening at one end. Another steel or iron rod is hit against it. The rod varies in thickness according to the intensity of the sound desired. While playing, the instrumentalist holds the triangle in the left hand. The technique can be summed up in two movements: holding the triyang with the left hand and hitting the horizontal part with the rod. Reducing pressure the left hand increases the intensity of the sound. Other crafted instruments like the bob are also used sometimes in the creativity process instruments like guitar; bongo and others are also added. However, the base remains the three initial instruments. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |

However, the listing of the element in the ICH list has led to its popularity and today many artists are engaged in Segga Tipik and are producing and ensuring safeguard and sustainability. The listing has also led to numerous performances like the Festival Kreol and others bringing in large turnout and further popularizing segga tipik ensuring its appreciation among the Mauritian population. |

Today, it is practiced by people of all origins across the whole island of Rodrigues in the Republic of Mauritius. The name Segá according to the ethnomusicologist Brigitte de Rosiers derives from the Swahili expression ‘tchega’ and designates the dance which consists in swinging the frock or skirt. As stated by the same ethnomusicologist, “Rodrigues Island is different from its neighbours as it has the conserved supremacy of the tambour and especially that of Segá Tambour Rodrig (Séga barré et Séga coupé) danced at all ages and all occasions where the body is possessed by the rhythm, bringing one in trance that is evocative of mother Africa.”(vivrodrigues.com)Among the essential regulations of Segá Tambour dance are: the large skirt of the female dancer held firmly by the hands and the blouse that covers from the top to the waist. Basically the musical instruments consist of the Tambour (Drum), the Triyang (an iron rod shaped in a triangle form), Bwat (2 tin cans) and the Mayos (two pieces of wood). The tambour is the leading percussion instrument which is played with bare hands to create a resonating sound. The triyang is held in one hand and is hit with another iron rod held in the second hand to create a scintillating sound. The two bwat are clapped against each other and same with the mayos. The tambour is an instrument made of goat skin stretched over a wooden circle. The same instrument is called Ravann in Mauritius. The tambour is heated on open fire to ensure the best tuning of the instrument, before being played. It is a regular activity as the performance goes on. In the island, the fire for warming the tambour is made from dry banana leaves readily available. The music is accompanied by song principally lead by the Mareshal (the main lady singer) who promptly composes songs and is joined in by other ladies from the group and the audience who act as chorus. The mareshal would signal the tambour player to start playing by shouting ‘sizione!!!!’. Then the other instruments are brought into the performance creating a vibrant and scintillating musical and dance performance. The others in the group and the audience join in the clapping of hands rhythmically to add up to the music. The performance is further accompanied by dances of couples. Normally, it is between a man and a woman where the man would open his arms and welcome the lady to dance and the lady would |                                                                                                                                                                                |

| swing her skirt and dance along. They would move around with short steps very swiftly with their feet flat on the ground. As noted by Lucrece Prosper one of the pioneer of Segá Tambour, “one needs to have ants on the legs to be able to dance Segá Tambour”. When rhythm is in full swing, the couples move in the middle of the dance floor and the man puts his hands around the woman without holding her. The pleasure of dancing is demonstrated on the smiles of the dancers as well as the performers. After some time another man joins to take the place of the first male dancer and usually the partner leaves the lady with the newcomer. However at times, in a competitive and playful spirit, the man refuses to leave ground preventing the intruder to slip between them. This leads to a playful dual and finally the first male dancer leaves the floor for the second one. The same step is taken by the female dancer who normally leaves the floor more elegantly and amicably for another female dancer to join. Segá Tambour is a rhythmic performance and the moving in and out of the dancers makes it a dynamic performing art of dance and theatre combined. The self-satisfaction of the performers is seen on their smiling faces and playful attitude applicable to musicians as well as dancers. Segá Tambour is the one performance known where the performers perform to please themselves. Along with its entertaining role, the songs that are usually composed on the spot, also act as a means of conflict resolution as well as gathering, passing information, sharing news and influencing social actions. Formally, if there were conflict between two persons or families, it would be resolved through sega tambour performance. The lyrics are often composed and used to point out mistakes or misunderstandings with the opportunity for the adversary to reply. This provides the Rodriguans with a means to respond to conflicts through words rather than physical confrontations (violence). The element is also used to address social issues such as the need for family ties through living together or in close proximity. Groups have been known to compose music questioning the rationale of having husbands work in distant places that have subsequently positively influenced the posting of people to their job places in relation to their homes. For example Lucrece Prosper of group Camaron composed a song about husbands being posted far away from their families, causing disharmony and breakages in family ties, a song that is said to have influenced the authorities in considering placement of people in relation to their place of origin. Within the Segá Tambour itself are different segments of expressions meant to deal with situations and occasions. For example: the conflict resolution songs were and are popularly referred to as ‘sega kompoze’, songs carrying messages on social issues that were notably popular during the early 40s are often referred to as ‘sega sosial’, and songs of historical events that have taken place in the country, for instance the time when boats would arrive only every 6 months from Mauritius and the Rodriguan population would wait for it with high expectations which would finally end up in disappointment or satisfaction as ‘sega istorik’. These are some of the subjects of much discussion within the element. When Segá Tambour became popular all over the island in the late 19th / early 20th Century, it was performed on a weekly basis either informally in any kind of gathering or formally in specific social events. It was performed all night long accompanied by a party of wine and baka (locally made rum). Today, it is performed on a regular basis and apart from conflict resolution and community entertainment, it is also nowadays performed in hotels and festivals as a tourist entertainment. In the yearly Festival Creole, which lasts for 5 days the dominant features are the dance, gatherings, debates, workshops and the unique Rodriguan identity within the Mascarenes. |     | Rodrigues musical heritage is attested-to by Brigitte Desrosiers who recorded for months a wide variety of songs including Sega Tambour. She states that, « Rodrigues Island offered a full space for this ethnomusicological quest and its isolation allowed it to preserve some of its practices, particularly among the elderly and I wanted to be the conveyor of this musical diversity that existed on the island before it opens up to the world.»                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                    |

| Short description Sega Tambour Chagos also known as Sega Chagos or Sega Sagosyen is a performing art of music, song and dance of the Chagossian community, including the ex-inhabitants of Diego Garcia, Peros Banos and Salomon Islands of the Chagos Archipelago and their descendants wherever they are. Although, the people of Chagos were uprooted from their islands, they have continued to strive to maintain their traditional music and ways of living in Mauritius and other places. For the Chagossians, their Sega (Sega Tambour Chagos) is a means of social bonding and communication. It is very different from the other Sega music in Mauritius, Rodrigues, Agalega and Reunion Islands in many ways. The instruments used in Sega Tambour Chagos are the ‘tambour’ also known as ‘ravann’, maravann, 'banc' (wooden bench), 'sifflé' (whistle), ‘triang’ (triangular iron rod) and 'boutey' (bottle). However, the 'tambour' remains the most important instrument which provides the basic rhythm for this traditional sega music and dance. The 'tambour' is a large and circular instrument made of goat, shark or ray skin. Before playing the tambour, it is heated and then played to produce throbbing and scintillating beats. However, today the tambour players also use synthetic ravann easily available in the market. The 'triang' fashioned out of a long iron bar, into a triangle, is an important instrument among the traditional ‘segatiers’ and is struck with metal rod to produce high-pitched ringing tone. The tinkling rhythm created by this instrument has its own moving eloquence. They also use boutey, which simply a bottle is struck with a light metal rod that add to the high pitched tinkling beat. While performance is on, one would join with a whistle (sifle) turning the performance into a more vigorous one and as the community say, this gives ‘lagam’. The performance is dominated by female dancers who wear long skirts with long and mid-length petticoats and a blouse. Most importantly, they wear the traditional scarf 'conde' on their head. The male dancers wear ordinary clothes like shorts, pants and shirts. It is said that the Chagossians have a decent way of dancing the sega compared to the other sega dances, as they do not show their legs while dancing. The female dancers start the dance with a slow swing of the hips and as soon as the beat of the 'tambour' begins, the latter start swinging vigorously and this circular movement is called ‘karousel’. They dance with an organized set of moves including circular swings as the men join in, in what is called ‘salie’. |                                                                           |

Another specificity of the dance is that the dancers keep the soles of their feet flat on the floor as they dance. In their native lands the chagossians performed in courtyards and Sega Tambour would take place each Saturday night continuing up to the morning of the next day.

Although, they have been uprooted from their native islands, the traditional bearers have continued to perform and transmit the traditions to the young generations. The songs' lyrics consist of daily life experiences and are often composed on the spot. According to the Chagossians, Sega Tambour Chagos is not only a form of social bonding but people sing with their hearts, relating to their day to day activities. It is to be noted that the people of the main islands comprising Chagos Archipelagos namely, Diego Garcia, Peros Banos and Salomon Islands, had their own ways of singing and dancing. Although the music and dance are the same, the lyrics differ between the various Islands and one can easily identify each of these songs as they narrate the events that took place on their respective islands.

According to the Chagossians, they only performed the 'Sega' on Saturday nights. The kids were not allowed to participate as it was considered a party for the adults only. The party basically consisted of the 'tambour' beating, singing, dancing and sharing of food and drinks, with the drinking and singing going on for hours'. Chagossians also state that the parties would start around eight o'clock in the evening and go on until the next morning and there was no need to invite people as anybody could participate freely.

There were no specific sega groups as anybody could sing and dance. Sega Tambour Chagos, usually did not require written lyrics as the people would memorize the lyrics in their minds. During the weekdays, while working, anybody could easily compose a song and sing it on the Saturday nights. The themes of the songs were diverse including narration of misery, happiness, sadness, rebellion, problems or even a mockery but where the concerned person would not feel offended. Instead, the latter would respond back by composing another song also similar in spirit to the Rodriguan tambour.

The party involved singing, dancing and eating and, the 'Baka', the 'Calou' and 'Seraz' were the most popular Chagossian drinks and food that were consumed on that day. The 'baka' was one of their favourite drinks which was made of fermented wheat, rice or lentils and pumpkin and other fruits. According to the Chagossians, baka was a healthy drink. The calou is a juice which is made from fermented coconut palm sap, while the 'Seraz' is fish with coconut milk.

The latter organised Sega parties every Saturday night and for festivities. People who wanted to organise a Sega Tanbour had to ask the permission from the Administration (Resident Manager) before and they were allowed to organise parties from 6 o'clock in the evening until 10 o'clock at night. Exceptionally for Christmas and New-year, the Sega nights were allowed to go beyond ten o'clock until the early morning. The invitation was spread by word of mouth. For these parties they served baka (a traditional fermented drink made of sugar and pulses) that they prepared the day before, on Friday. At six o'clock when everything was set and the bucket of baka ready, the woman usually started singing and with two sticks hit the pole of the veranda, accompanied by the tambour she gave the rhythm. The Agalegan said Sega pe sofe (Sega is heating up) or pe fer lapelasyon (calling) to refer to this traditional way of calling people to attend the party. The woman sung 'Ti la le Ola la' followed by a medley of spontaneous texts, sung her sorrows, joy or/and daily life activities such as love, death, separation, fishing and sometimes she also composed on other people. It was a Sega lant (slow Sega) and on hearing the song, gradually people headed to the house where the party was organised and later on other musicians with their tambour, triangle and jerry canes joined in and the rhythm changed. Sometimes, there were some three to four drums. The melody became more rhythmic and male voices could be heard with people clapping their hands and singing. When the guests arrived, they first drank a kata (coconut recipient) of baka and then they started dancing. There was a bond fire to heat the drum and people spontaneously composed songs. It was an occasion for people to socialise, to relax while having some good time and for people to meet. An anecdote on the Sega Tambour was that at the end of the Sega night people left in pairs and the next day people would know who left the party with whom. |                             |

|     | The musical skills, knowledge and dexterity that local musicians showed and the vernacular language and expressions are peculiar to Agalega. The social role of Sega Tambouras well constitutes its intangible. It was a means to resolve conflicts and to maintain social order. People composed on others and sometimes on people with whom they were in conflict. It was a means to pass on a message to the latter who retaliated by composing another song and it went on like that until they resolved the conflict or sometimes it could wind up in a fight.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

Nowadays, besides traditional musical instruments other modern electronic instruments are used during performances. Now, a modern version of Sega Tambour is played rather than a traditional version per se. There has been an appropriation of some typical Agalegan words and expressions by non-Agalegan singers as well as a re-adaptation of the traditional Sega Tambour. The creative process underlying the composition of Sega Tambour songs has evolved over the years. Long ago, Sega Tambour was a means for the composer to pass on a message to someone else and people composed songs based on their life experiences such as their work and personal life. But nowadays, the writing activity is different whereby singers write on different subjects. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

At this time, balls were organised amongst the European settlers, in private houses. These balls had as repertoire French music and dances: quadrille (kadri), polka, mazurka (mazok), waltz (vals), scottish (kotis). As there was a lack of musicians to entertain these balls and musicians of the working class (mainly slaves' descendants) were to integrate the orchestra. They accepted and learned these European music and instruments. It was also a way for them to be considered socially and get out of their slump. The Sega Salon took birth in the quadrille, European dance and music very popular in the 19th century in ballrooms. Quadrille is composed of five figures/parts danced by four couples arranged in a square, with each couple facing the centre. The parts are highly structured and predetermined, leaving little space to improvisation. Le Pantalon was a popular song, where the second and third figures (L'été and La Poule) were popular dances. La Pastourelle was a well-known ballad. And the finale was very lively and opened to improvisation. This opening allowed the musicians of slave descent to introduce the traditional Seg- rhythm in this European musical structure. The musical encounter begun in these conditions and by the end of the 19th century, this fifth figure of mixed form was naturally called "Seg-" and was appreciated by people attending these ballrooms. The Sega Salon is characterized by the use of melodic instruments: violon, banjo, accordion and the jazz (the bass drum equipped with a cymbal) compared to Seg- which is mainly played with percussion instruments. As far as the dance is concerned, the strictness of the original steps of the European dances was swept away by the free gestures of the Sega Tipik. However, European dances influenced this creolized form of Seg- by the fact that the dancers started to hold/touch each other. We can still see this posture in the Sega Kordeon of Rodrigues and in the Seg- of Reunion island, but it was not preserved in the Mauritian Sega Modern. The structure of the Seg- songs was also influenced by European structure and integrated the verses and chorus structure. Just like the Seg- entered upper class ballrooms through quadrille, European music (polka, waltz, scottish, etc.) invested the popular circles around the 1930s, in a "creolized" form. Small music bands were created all around Mauritius. These groups entertained balls that were organized by families and friends (bal zariko, bal kouler) and also public balls. For little money, these music bands became very popular and crossed the island until the late 1980's to |                                        |

One of the last groups was the one led by Louis L'Intelligent, violinist of Chamarel, who died at the age of 84 in August 2010. The leading figures of Sega Salon, Jacques Cantin (died in 1992) and Serge Lebrasse, embodied the bridge between the Sega Salon and the Sega Modern, by developing a transitional form of Sega known as Sega Popiler (popular Sega) characterized by the introduction of amplified instruments such as electric guitar, bass, drums and performed in the context of popular balls. However this style of Sega is not identified as an element of this inventory as it was a transitional form. Today, we call the Sega of this interim period, Sega Lontan (Old Sega).                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

It was imported into France then to Réunion and finally to Mauritius in the 1860s. As in Réunion Island, the banjo in Mauritius is often made in an artisanal fashion. It has a simple design and this allows artisans to produce several varieties. The banjo is foremost a melodic instrument, but can, like the guitar contribute to the instrumental rhythmic sound of a musical band. The typical feature is its mixed use allowing it to play a melody as well as a harmonic and rhythmic accompaniment.</li> <li>• Violin: The violin is a chordophone with a bow and four strings fitted to the fifth (G, D, A, E). Its resonance body consists of a background and a soundboard, connected on the sides by eclipses. Between them is the support made of maple that supports the strings attached to their end in the four pins of the head. The strings then pass above the maple neck that supports the ebony fingerboard, to finally attach to the tailpiece. Inside the box, the harmony bar, a rod of fir glued against the inner wall of the top table to strengthen it. Finally, the soul, also in fir, cut diagonally connects tables between and adapts to their arching. The bow is formed and a stick cambered iron, to be firm and flexible at the same time, a durable and flexible horsehair rudder is attached to an ebony prop. Usually, the performer holds his violin between the collar bone and chin. However, as in Réunion Island, in Mauritius, some violinists place the violin further down the shoulder. This appears to be a practice existing since the 19th century. The last violinists of Mauritius, the Creole fiddlers, hold the violin at the chest as it is the case also in Madagascar.</li> <li>• Accordion: The accordion and the harmonica are the only aerophones integrated into the music of the Mascarenes Islands. The accordion is a hip, wind tunnel and keyboard instrument. Its mechanism is based on the alternation of extension and compression of the bellows: the air vibrates arranged free hip at its ends and produces a particular sound. Often, the seated instrumentalist plays bass with the left hand, while his right hand plays the melody on a keyboard or buttons. Thus this instrument can produce powerful sounds as well as providing both a melody and its harmonic accompaniment.</li> <li>• Jaz/Jazz: This word has double meaning. It is the name given to the musical groups (Jaz or band) performing the Sega Salon as well as an instrument (the bass drum of a drum equipped with a cymbal).</li> </ul> |

The Seg a and more broadly, Creole expression songs, became the vehicle for political ideologies. In this claim for a national identity, the Seg a transcends borders, in the texts as well as in its instrumentation. Music bands, called grup kiltirel (cultural groups) were affiliated to different political movements. The well-known Grup kiltirel Soley Ruz (Red Sun cultural Group) can be considered as the initiator of this cultural and intellectual shift. In 1975, their album Nu kiltir (our culture) was largely disseminated. Poets, playwrights, writers, composers were on the same platform to claim Enn sel lepep, enn sel nasion (one people, one nation). About 10,000 people gathered in festivals. The prevailing discourse was that Mauritius must be freed from colonial codes in all areas: economic, political, linguistic and cultural. The aim of these grup kiltirel was to raise consciousness about all oppressive situations. The texts were imbued with political and social themes: unemployment, gender inequality, need for the federation of the working class, employer-employee relations, etc. Moreover, what was happening in the rest of the world was also a concern. Bam Cuttayan, a beacon of Seg a Angaze, sang Diego (a song on deportation of the Chagossians), Victor Jara (a song about the murder in prison of the Chilean musician, artist and activist), and Amandla (a song on Nelson Mandela). On stage, the tabla, the sitar and the harmonium (Indian traditional music instruments) encountered the traditional musical instruments of the Seg a Tipik. Seg a practice was no longer confined to the Afro-Mauritian community; it entered all the ethno cultural groups and was now performed not only by Mauritians of African and Malagasy origins. Siven Chinien, a well-known practitioner, was also a singer of gamat – traditional songs performed during Hindu weddings. As the main function of Seg a Angaze is to politically empower people of the working class, dancing on crude realities of life evoked in the texts was inappropriate. Furthermore, the meeting of the different instruments created a unique melody on which one cannot dance. |                                                                                                                       |

Actually it is the most prevalent music of the island. There is no cultural show without Sega Modern bands. This kind of Seg is characterized by the introduction of amplified musical instruments like drums, bass, guitar, which led to this new form of Seg during the 1960s. Although some tradition bearers contest the authenticity of this Seg which became a commercial instrument and has supplanted the traditional Seg; the development of Sega Modern offered an opening of this music to all social classes in Mauritius as well as on the world. Indeed, by the 1950s, the Seg still suffered from the disdain of middle classes who perceived it as morally deviant. It is with the appearance of Sega Popiler in the 1960s, a transitional form of Seg between the Sega Salon and the Sega Modern, that amplifying instruments such as electric guitar, bass and drums were introduced in Seg. However, while Sega Popiler was still confined in the popular class, Sega Modern entered all the ranges of the society in particular with the recordings of Seg on singles contributing to a better dissemination and recognition of this music and songs. One of the first Seg singers to record singles is Serge Lebrasse. In 1958, Serge Lebrasse, won a scholarship to study Music, and met Philippe Ohsan, who was the Conductor of the Police Band. Lebrasse became the first civilian singer of the Police Band. Under the direction of Philippe Ohsan, the Police Band accompanied many Seg singers. Assisting a show, John Venpin, a music producer, saw Serge Lebrasse onstage. These songs flooded in people's houses and the disdain that the middle class had for Seg faded. Furthermore, Seg crossed the borders and opened to the world with Maria Seg (born Rochecouste), the first Seg singer recognized in France, and who contributed greatly to the spread of Seg in Europe in the 1960s. She spent 10 years in France and 13 years in Madagascar. And she recorded many Seg songs, such as the famous title: La Pointe-aux-Piments. But consecration of Sega Modern in Europe is in the song "Alalila" which was the "summer hit" in France in 1991. Seg bands are regularly invited to participate in international festivals and many of them have toured in Europe, Australia, and Canada where there are significant Mauritian diasporas. Moreover, Sega Modern became known to the world through the development of the tourism industry in Mauritius in the 1970's and the introduction of Seg in the hotels to entertain tourists. The first band performing in hotels was Les Corsaires (the Pouzet brothers). Gradually, other |                                                                                     |

|     | Sega singers, such as Roger Augustin, Roger Clency, Cyril Labonne, etc., were to perform Sega shows in hotels. In this new performing context, the music, dance and costumes evolved to become a folkloric show. The most evident change was in the clothing. Traditional clothing made of large skirts with petticoat and a konde (a scarf placed on the women's head) were replaced by colourful large flowery skirts without petticoats and a short blouse leaving the belly naked. The dancers were barefoot on stage. This design was influenced by costumes worn by female dancers in a ballet on the theme of Sega created by choreographer Val Cheung Chak around 1973. Those costumes are still being used in Sega Modern performances in hotels. The dance changed. The free gestures and improvisation generally found in traditional Sega gave way to established choreographies. The free body expression gave place to commercial and demonstrative dances. However, the themes remained the same such as everyday social life issues or drug abuse. The lyrics lost their importance. Sega is no more a means of claiming freedom of expression or of resistance, as it could have been in the past. The lyrics are easy to remember and follow the European influence referring to a verses and chorus structure. This vulgarization of Sega in the 1980's drove to a kind of Sega Komersial (commercial Sega). And in the 1990's, with new technologies in the music sector, hundreds of albums were recorded yearly and the Sega inundated radio and tv shows. Today, the financial aspect of Sega Modern incites local producers to exclusively sponsor Sega Modern albums. The increasing number of female Sega singers producing albums is also a notable indication of the evolution of the music sector. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

| 1.5 | Short description Like in every cultural expression, since its creation to contemporary expression, the Sega has evolved and enriched itself through contact with other musical forms. In this way, sega links the past, the present and the future. This musical style created by late Joseph Réginald Topize, also known as Kaya, is a mixture of the Jamaican Reggae and Mauritian Sega. The themes of Seggae music range in a wide variety. The themes revolve primarily around issues facing contemporary society. The Rastafarian culture is put in the foreground. Kaya drew inspiration from biblical texts and his message advocated openness to other cultures, tolerance and harmony between people. In his lyrics, he also castigated the loss of moral values. Furthermore one can note a return to African culture and roots. Today, leading figures of Seggae promote in their lyrics and public discourses a Mauritian society without any racial partitioning. Nowadays, Seggae concerts attract thousands of people and its social and identity function has gained importance. |                                                                                    |

| 1.5          | Short descriptionThe Sagai of Menwar (Stephano Honoré) incorporates instruments that the artist makes himself or herself with elements and objects such as pistachio shells, baget matlasie (mattress maker), cans, etc. According to Menwar, the Sagai is an encounter of Segga, with blues, jazz, rock, and Seggae . The name Sagai refers to a harpoon used by fishermen, the spear of the warrior and the rod of the mattress maker. Rarely seen in modern Segga, the Sagai reintroduces traditional instruments of segga, such as the ravann and maravann which can be considered as the backbone of the Sagai |                                                                   |

| 1.5                         | Short descriptionEvery Chinese New Year Parade ends with a Dragon Dance. The parades start on New Year's Day and continue for the next fifteen days until the end of the festivities with the Lantern Festival. The Dragon Parade is a highlight of the festivities. The Dragon represents wisdom, power, and wealth and a very important aspect of Chinese Culture. It is also said that the Dragon Dance performed on New Year's Day scares away the evil spirits and all the bad luck with them. During the Dance, a dozen or so performers hold the dragon up on poles. Usually one person places a Pearl of Dragon in front of the dragon and the dragons follow it. They raise and lower the Dragon making him "dance" as they wind through the masses to the sounds of horns, drums and gongs. It symbolises the bringing of good luck and prosperity in the year to come for all the human beings on earth. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

| 1.5 | Short description Sega Akordeon were organised every Sundays after mass. It started at approximately 13hrs and ended at approximately 19 hrs. In some regions, Sega Akordeon were organised on Sunday nights. Local musicians used to compose melodies based on something they experienced or witnessed in their everyday life. They built on European music to come with a local composition that was played during the Sega Akordeon. Traditionally, there were no songs attached to these compositions and later on, songs composed on other people were added. These songs were somewhat true stories or life histories. They heard these European melodies on the radio or gramophone. Based on these European melodies and inspired by everyday scenes and life experiences, they composed Sega Akordeon that is different from Sega Tambour. There were Sega music, dance specific for Sega Tambour and those specific for Sega Akordeon. For Sega accordion, the dancers have to listen to the triyang (triangle) and the musician who plays the triangle has to listen to the bass of the accordionist. |                                        |

| 4.1 | Threats to the enactment;The traditional Danse Akordeon has evolved over the years following technological evolution. Nowadays, besides traditional musical instruments other modern electronic instruments are used during performances. Now, a modern version of Danse Akordeon is played rather than the traditional version. The creative process underlying the composition of music for Danse Akordeon has evolved over the years. Long ago, local musicians used to compose melodies based on something they lived or that they witnessed in their everyday life. The repertoire of the great musicians has disappeared and in the contemporary compositions, the young musicians zot melanz tou (do not respect the specificity of each type of music and mix everything). Example, each polka had a kadans (rhythm) and a vire (a time to turn). There were many Rodriguans who composed local songs and music but these compositions have either gone into oblivion or the recordings have disappeared. Sega Akordeon was a means for the composer to pass on a message to someone else and people composed songs based on their life experiences such as their work and personal life. But nowadays, the writing activity is different whereby singers write on different subjects. |                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| 4.2 | Threats to the transmission;The traditional Sega Akordeon is still alive in the collective memory. But owing to frequent circular movement to Mauritius, and expansion of mass-media and technological innovations (Internet and computers), there is limited transmission to the young generation that are influenced by western music that is more and more popular in Rodrigues such as Rap, Reggae and Seggae and house music. Besides, people of Rodriguan origins who grew up in Mauritius have adopted the Mauritian lifestyle and have been socialised in the Mauritian cultural system. There is a lack of interests in the ancestral practices and traditions.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                      |

(2010:86-88) in Rodrigues, the term Romans refers to love songs that were sung in French and without instruments. It was a tradition borrowed from the French popular songs that dates back to the 17th and 18th Centuries. This oral tradition was imported to Rodrigues and given the insularity of Rodriguan society, many love songs that disappeared in other colonies were preserved in the collective memory of Rodriguans. Although these love songs were of French origin, yet, across times, they evolved and thus, a modified form of Romans, different from the original ones, have been transmitted across generations. The author also highlighted that, even though Rodriguans were illiterate in French language, yet, they learnt the songs by heart as they were transmitted and sung in French. Whilst the repertoire of these songs used to be alive in people's memories, yet, they are dying with the elderly generation since there is limited transmission to the present generation. Based on his description of Romans, it is obvious that they were inherent to the courtship and wedding traditions at that time. As the relationship between a man and a woman progressed, there was Romance to cross each stages of the relationship. For example: there was a love song to end a relationship and one to reject the proposal of a man. He identified two types of love songs that he named: Romans de deklarasyon(Eng. Trans: declaration love songs): It was a form of oral poetry in which the narrator sung his love to his suitor and, similarly the suitor sung back her answer. Long ago, it was the norm for the man to sing his love to the woman he was courting and the woman to reply in singing whether she accepts or rejects his proposal. For example: the man sung his marriage proposal to the woman he had chosen; the woman sung a Romans to accept the proposal and finally the former sung back a Romansde remersiman (acceptance love song). Romans de mariaz (Eng. Trans: Wedding love songs): There were specific love songs that were sung at the different stages of the wedding ceremony such as during the wedding cortege, when the couple left the ceremony and when the bride reached home. In his analysis of the wedding love songs, Soussigné J.P (2010: 88) wrote that, firstly, the theme of farewell to the mother country prevailed in most of these songs. Secondly, they were patriotic songs that either referred to Napoleon or to the Napoleonic period and, thirdly, they were of Roman Catholic inspiration. For him, these wedding love songs were sad and melancholic song because, in France, it was a tradition to cry the bride before she leaves for her new life. Long ago, romances were part of the rituals surrounding courtship and a love relationship between a man and women. Singing a Romans at each stage of a relationship was not only part of the convention but can also be seen as a passage rite since it was a symbolical way to mark the passage from one phase in a relationship to the other. |                                                                |

|     | In Agalega also, during the bal dan lakres (ball in the crèche), they used to sing Romans (romance). For the Agalegans, Romans were songs in Creole except Sega songs. The songs were not necessarily about love they could be on any topic and usually they were of Seychellois origins. It was a a slow rhythmic way of singing to narrate, for example, a story of past legacies, to communicate and solve sensible issues such as: fights, love confessions and relationships break offs and to talk about the life of a deceased. Further research is needed on the various songs and dances that were performed in Chagos and that are still being performed by Chagossians |                                                                                          |          |                            |

Work songs are a component of folk oral traditions; they were either sung while working or they were about a specific occupational task. However, in Rodrigues, work songs were called Sante Zariko which, according to Soussigné J.P (2010: 106) can be considered as a variant of Cajun Louisiana ‘zydeco’. It is believed by the Rodriguan historian/researcher Noel Allas that, the Rodriguan, who used to cultivate beans, has transformed the terminology ‘zydeco’ into ‘zariko’. Another simple explanation to that substitution of the term ‘zydeco’ by ‘zariko’; could be that the Rodriguan, being illiterate, found ‘zariko’ more a simple term to grasp than ‘zydeco’. In this way, it became a more familiar term to them since it formed part of their everyday life. This was a way to make the work funnier and joyful for them, thus they could forget the fact that they were working in the blazing sun. Although agriculture was diversified, it seems that the work songs repertoire was limited solely to the bean crop. Indeed, Rodriguan red kidney beans were and are still famous in Mauritius and, until the sixties; it was a main agricultural practice. The songs regulated the pace of people’s work at each stage – in the field as well as during harvesting and threshing. They also encouraged people to continue working at a steady pace, when the latter were tired and created a form of group cohesion and bonding. The ‘up-and-down’ movement of the pickaxe in the earth by the men and the sound of the women sowing the seed and covering the ditches, while simultaneously singing, created the necessary rhythm to make the Lamizik zariko. According to Soussigné J.P (2010:107) testimonies, the sound of the tools constituted the rhythmic beat while the song consisted of a form of solo-response pattern:The sound of pickaxes hitting the ground produced rhythmic sound and set the pace of work. While two men raised his pickaxe, the other dug in, creating a crisscross rhythm that Rodriguans called mango. When the men had finished their task and that women were late, they sometimes sang teasing songs accompanied by the rhythm of clashing rocks. These songs could be performed when they had finished work. The same pace alternately gave the pace during threshing activity. With the help of blows struck in a circle around the cluster. Half sticks hit the bag while the other half was lifted. They could sing several songs during this activity. Given that the cultivation of beans is gradually disappearing from local agricultural practices, the memory of these Sante Zariko is threatened of going into oblivion. Indeed, few people are aware of work songs as a vital historical and intangible cultural heritage that can be dated back to colonial times. The working songs were sung by the Rodriguans during the sowing as well as the harvesting of beans; each step having its own repertoire of songs that paced the speed of the work. |     | sowing time, the Sega Plante (Sower's Segá) was sung, and at harvesting time the Sega Zariko (bean Segá) could be heard. According to one informant, at sowing time the men dig the small holes fouyer (the men who dig the ditches); the women follow in line alongside them. Each woman semez (the women who sow the grains in the ditches) take two rows and they drop two or three seeds in each hole. Then, they cover-up the ditches with a side movement of the foot as they move ahead, while singing at the same time. As North-Coombes stated it: "Singing a song speeds up the work considerably because in this way both the men and the women work together at the same speed" (1971, p.280). The idea behind the singing, in addition of providing courage, is one of ensuring that there is productivity in labour. Hence, at the same time that the work will be done quickly; it will also be done in an efficient way. Cultivation of beans is a task that is a highly competitive one; whereby, when the women are not able to follow the pace at which the men are moving they are subject to mockery from the men's part and vice-versa. Still, all this was done through the use of songs and in a good-humoured spirit. |                                                                                                                        |

These songs did not only encourage people to drink more but they were also a mean to break down barriers and for people to socialise in a lively environment. In fact, songs were inherent to social life including drinking. Chansons à boire (Drinking songs): In various cultures, drinking songs were and are still part of the drinking process. Whether for festive events or in taverns or in bars, songs accompanied the act of drinking such as people used to sing to order their drinks or to say that their glasses were empty or to toast. This tradition of French origin was imported to Rodrigues and transformed to reflect the local cultural specificities. Hence, as per the chansons à boire quoted in the report of Sousigné J.P (2010), the songs were mostly in French with some in Rodriguan Creole. Besides, some of them made reference to French traits such as the king, the round-table and wine. They were lively, humorous songs that only encouraged people to drink but they were inherent to the festive ambiance and to the celebration. ‘Drinking Songs’ brought much warmth amidst the families and neighbours during period of festivities; namely during New Year celebrations and in Marriages. Amongst those songs, we can identify certain banane(Eng. Trans: New Year) songs, as well as other feasts songs (like Marriages for instance). In former times, for the celebration of the New Year, the patriarch accompanied by his family, all went to visit their first neighbour on their way. The neighbour’s family having joined in, the crew grew bigger and they set out to visit the second neighbour. The Rodriguan was well-known as a hard-worker but also as a reveller who did not skimp on the consumption of spirits. As North-Coombes says: “When the New Year comes, they celebrate well and truly, and for several days.” (1971, p.278). Thus, the crowd became bigger and that liquor started to overheat the head, the directory of songs as well as the joy increased. Each time that a drink was over, without losing time another one was asked for – another one for the road as the Rodriguan would commonly say it. The request for another drink was made through a song: the drinking song. |                                                                                                                   |

| 1.5          | Short descriptionThe Laval is an intense waltz and fast rythmn. It is originated from Germany, the German waltzen which means turn. The Rodriguan version can make ones head spin if techniques are not controlled. Long ago, the waltz dance was forbidden because the partners have to touch each other. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| 1.5          | Short descriptionThe Mazok comes from the word mazurka. It is a Polish dance, originated from Masuria. It is a folk dance performed in couples, which later became a ballroom dancing. There is also the mazok krwaze which is performed in Rodrigues. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| 1.5          | Short descriptionThe kadri in Rodrigues comes from the word quadrille. It is less danced nowadays because it is considered too complicated and boring due to its repetitiveness. It is also known as lancier. The lanciers, is a European dance, whereby a series of dances are performed by four couples. It is a dance composed of five figures; each figure is performed four times so that each couple can participate. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |

| Sega Makalapo Sagos is a Sega sung in Chagossian Creole which took birth like other segas during the slavery period. The main instruments used are the ‘tambour’, ‘makalapo’, ‘triyang’ and maravann. The lyrics are based on the daily life and was also used as a means to convey messages across the different islands. This type of Sega is less practiced nowadays. Further research is needed. |                                                                                                                                    |

| 1.5 | Short description The performance during the bal dan lakres was different from the Sega Tanbour. The ball was organised under the veranda of the nursery that is why it was named bal dan lakres. They had to ask the permission of the Administration and it was organised on Saturday nights from 6 o'clock in the evening until 10 o'clock at night except for Christmas and New-year, the ball could go beyond ten o'clock until late at night. For Christmas, the ball started after Minuit Chretien (O Holy Night prayers). The instruments played were different from those played during the Sega Tanbour, the tanbour was not played during the bal dan lakres. The tradition instruments played were the harmonica and a triangle. There was also someone that used to tap his foot to set the rhythm; they could dance all night long listening to the sound of the tapping foot. Later, the violin, guitar, mandolin and accordion were also played in the ball. The music and composition played during the ball were of Seychellois origins since, long ago, Agalega had close links with the Seychelles and they also listened to Seychellois radio broadcast. Sega de salon were sung during that event. Women did not sing since the young men were the singers, while women were the dancers. The sequence of the songs was pre-established and therefore, the songs were not spontaneously composed. |                              |

| 4.2 | Threats to the transmission;The traditional bal dan lakres is still alive in the collective memory. But owing to frequent circular movement to Mauritius, there is limited transmission to the young generation that is enculturated in Mauritian cultures. Although, Agalega is an isolated island, yet, they are not protected from external influences especially from Mauritius.Besides, people of Agalegan origins who grew up in Mauritius have adopted the Mauritian lifestyle and nightlife and have been socialised in the Mauritian cultural system.
